glers escaped into Mexico, although all crossing points along the border are being closely guarded.

Gov. Colquitt was among the first to be notified of the trouble. He offered to send the Rangers to the scene, but this offer was later declined. Regular troops have been dispatched to that country with orders to endeavor to capture the smugglers. If the latter have not crossed the river into Mexico, it is pretty certain that there will be more trouble and probably further fatalities later on.

The smugglers were following a wagon train loaded with ammunition and apparently were bound for the Jardin Crossing on the Rio Grande. They were overtaken by Sheriff Gardner and a posse of citizens a few miles southwest of Carrizo. The posse split into two divisions and a detachment under command of Deputy Sheriffs Buck and Ortiz was sent on ahead.

When he opened fire on the smugglers a few minutes later, Sheriff Gardner discovered that Buck and Ortiz had been captured and were in danger of being shot at once. At the request of the two prisoners, the posse retired. The Mexicans started for the river, forcing the officers to accompany them.

Lieut. McLean and a company of troops hurried to the scene from Eagle Pass and were due to arrive there before midnight. It seems, however, that in the meantime another posse was organized and the Mexicans were forced to give up one prisoner and their much-prized ammunition, after killing Ortiz.

Big Increase in Concrete Construction
Washington, Sept. 12.—Indicating the steady advance in concrete building construction over more ancient methods, the sand and gravel output in the United States during 1912 surpassed the output of any other year excepting 1910, according to figures made public today by the United States Geological Survey. The output for 1912 was valued at $23,081,555. Although the 1911 output was larger in quantity, its value was only $21,158,583.

ing. Sheriff Buck, taken with Ortiz, was recaptured by another posse later in the day. This posse came into possession of several thousand rounds of ammunition and considerable dynamite which had been abandoned by the smugglers.

Full details of the first battle have not been received, but it is said that one Mexican was killed and several others were fatally wounded. It is supposed that the remainder of the smug-

NEW YORK MAYOR DEAD

DEATH OVERTAKES HIM ON VOYAGE TO EUROPE—POLITICAL SITUATION MIXED.

New York, Sept. 11.—William J. Gaynor, mayor of New York city, voyaging over sea on the steamer Baltic, in the hope of regaining his strength to enter the three-cornered municipal campaign as a candidate for re-election, died suddenly on the Baltic as the steamer was within a few hundred miles of the Irish coast yesterday afternoon.

The first news of his death, flashed by wireless and delayed by cable from Europe, reached his secretary, Robert Adamson, Thursday morning. The mayor had succumbed to heart failure, the message said.

Later dispatches from his son, Rufus W. Gaynor, who was his father's only traveling companion, gave details which showed that the end had come with shocking suddenness.

"Father died at 1:07 p. m., Wednesday, the 10th," said a message from the son received by Secretary Adamson tonight. "His death was due to heart failure. He was seated in his deck chair at the time. I and the nurse and the ship's doctor were with him. I discovered him unconscious in his chair, though still alive. He died about three minutes later without recognizing any of us. Everything possible was done, but he seemed to go as a candle flickers out. Am all right and am trying to arrange to bring the body back on the Lusitania, sailing from Liverpool on Saturday, the 13th."

That the mayor's heart had been in a weakened condition for years was the statement tonight of physicians who treated him at the time he was shot in the neck and almost done to death by an insane discharged employee of the city in August, 1910. They would not declare their belief that the would-inflicted by the bullet had led directly to the end today, but did affirm that his general resistance had been lessened thereby to a very great extent.

Plans for a public funeral to be held probably on Monday, September 22, will be made tomorrow by the board of estimate. Late advices from abroad say the body may be transferred from the Baltic to the steamer Cedric sailing from Queenstown tomorrow, or if that arrangement cannot be effected, to the Lusitania, sailing from Liverpool on Saturday and will arrive in New York Friday or Saturday of next week.

The death of Mayor Gaynor automatically transferred the office of mayor to Colonel Ardolph L. Kline, a republican, president of the board of aldermen. President Kline took the oath of office late today and his first official act was to call the board of estimate together to lay plans for the public funeral services of his predecessor.

Mayor Kline then declared that during his short term of office, which will terminate January 1, 1913, he would carry out the policies of Mayor Gaynor so far as he knew them.

BIG RAIN AND WIND AT CHICKASHA, OKLA.

Chickasha, Ok., Sept. 11.—During the heavy wind and rainstorm this afternoon the roof and walls of a local garage in this city caved in, burying twenty-two automobiles beneath the wreckage. Over half the cars were ruined by the collapse of the building and the remainder were badly damaged. The workmen who were in the building barely escaped from the falling walls.

The heaviest rain of the year struck this city just after noon today. Three inches of water have fallen and the rain is still pouring down. This is the fifth day of showers.

R. L. Zumbro and Mr. Morgan of Fitchburg were in the city this afternoon. They reported plenty of rain.

EXPEIMENT WITH EGYPTIAN COTTON

This morning Homer Williams was showing a sample of Egyptian cotton of which he has raised two stalks this year. A friend sent him a few genuine imported seed but only two came up. He says that they resisted the drouth in a most remarkable manner, being in the neighborhood of five feet in height still fresh and green and loaded down with bolls. Only two bolls have yet opened, but the lint from these is remarkably long and will command a fancy price. From the numerous bolls on the two stalks he will get enough seed to make an experiment on a larger scale. He hopes in time to cross it with the Rawdon variety so that he will get a variety with larger bolls than the Egyptian and at the same time get the drouth resisting qualities of the imported kind.

The cotton market today has been practically unchanged and closed with in one point of Thursday's close. So far as Ada was concerned the day was a complete blank, the rain putting a stop to all operations.

TURN HAIR DARK

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though we don't have the troublesome task of gathering sage and the mussing mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff itching scalp and falling hair.

FAITH IN CHRIST IS NECESSARY

DAY EVENING'S SERVICE.

The weather did not keep the folks from attending the Baptist meeting Thursday night. Evangelist Sid Williams preached on "Faith in Christ Necessary." The choir is doing fine work under the direction of Miss McMillan and the prayer service is conducted by Pastor Stubblefield.

At Thursday evening's service the evangelist said in part:

"Without faith it is impossible to please Him. For he that cometh to God must believe that He is, and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him." (Heb. 11:6)

"This is the work of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent." (John 6:29)

Jesus Christ, and love one another." (1 John 3:23)

"If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shall believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." (Rom. 10:9-10)

"What doth hinder me to be baptized?" And Philip said, "If thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest." And he answered and said, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." (Acts 8:36-37)

You may have all the moral qualities; you may labor and toil and give of all your goods to the cause of Christ; you may attend church and prayer meeting and even call men to repentance, and none of these things will be well pleasing unto God without faith. "To him that worketh not, but believeth in Him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness." (Rom. 4:5)

Faith produces work, it is the foundation of human activity. What a man believes, that is he, as a man believes, so is he. "Faith without works is dead."

Yeast in dough, if it is alive, will work and will make the dough rise. If yeast will not work it is dead, so faith, in man, if it does not produce works, is dead.

Grains of gold may be mixed with so much dirt and dross that the presence of the precious metal is completely concealed, but let it be subjected to the refiner's fire, then the true is separated from the false and become visible to all. Likewise, faith can never be destroyed, but at the moment of supreme trial rises superior to, and is plainly distinguishable from all base imitations.

What is Faith?
"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." (Heb. 11:1)

Faith is the ground of our hope. Revelation without faith is as useless as light without vision.

Truths of Faith.

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word and believeth in Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life." (John 5:24)

"Being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." (Rom. 5:1)

"But that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, is evident; for 'the just shall live by faith.'" (Gal. 3:11)

"And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the son of man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life. For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." (John 3:14-15)

"In whom, though now ye see Him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." (1 Peter 1:8)

is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." (John 3:18)

He that believeth in the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not in the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." (John 3:36)

I had never known the dread of great heights which many people feel, and I laughed and stepped backward, expecting to land on the parapet behind me. But the point of my scabbard struck against the battlements, forcing me outward; I stumbled, staggered, and swayed a moment, striving desperately to recover my balance; I felt my gloved fingers slipping along the smooth face of the parapet, my knees gave way with terror; then my fingers clutched something—an arm—and I swung back, slap against the parapet, hanging to that arm with all my weight. A terrible effort and I planted my boots on the leads and looked up with sick eyes into the eyes of the Countess.

"Can you stand it?" I groaned, clutching her arm with my other hand.

"Yes—don't be afraid," she said calmly. "Draw me toward you; I cannot draw you over."

"Press your knees against the battlements," I gasped.

She bent one knee and wedged it into a niche.

"Don't be afraid; you are not hurting me," she said, with a ghastly smile.

I raised one hand and caught her shoulder, then, drawn forward, I seized the parapet in both arms, and waited to the last roof.

A fog seemed to blot my eyes; I shook from hair to heel and laid my head against the solid stone, while the blank, throbbing seconds passed. The Countess stood there, shocked and breathless. I saw her sleeve in rage, and the snowy skin all bruised beneath.

What irony lurks in blind chance that I should owe this woman my life—this woman whose home I had come to confiscate, whose friends I had arrested, who herself was now my prisoner, destined to the shame of exile!

Perhaps she divined my thoughts—I do not know—but she turned her troubled eyes to the arched window, where a painted saint imbedded in golden glass knelt and beat his breast with two heavy stones.

"Madame," I said slowly, "your courage and your goodness to me have made my task a heavy one. Can I lighten it for you in any manner?"

She turned towards me, almost timidly. "Could I go to Morsbronn before—before I cross the frontier? I have a house there; there are a few things I would like to take—"

She stopped short, seeing, doubtless, the pain of refusal in my face. "But, after all, it does not matter. I suppose your orders are formal?"

"Yes, madame."

"Then it is a matter of honor?"

"A soldier is always on his honor; a soldier's daughter will understand that."

"I understand," she said.

We had stopped, by a mutual impulse, at the head of the stone stairway.

"Why do you shelter such a man as John Buckhurst?" I asked, abruptly.

She raised her eyes to me with perfect composure.

"Why do you ask?"

"Because I have come here from Paris to arrest him."

She bent her head thoughtfully and laid the tips of her fingers on the sculptured balustrade.

"To me," she said, "there's no such thing as a political crime."

"It is not for a political crime that we wait John Buckhurst," I said, watching her. "It is for a civil outrage."

Her face was like marble; her hands tightened on the fretted carving.

"What crime is he charged with?" she asked, without moving.

"He is charged with being a common thief," I said.

"It is brutal to make such a charge!" she said. "Will you pledge me your honor that if he answers satisfactorily to that false charge of theft, the government will let him go free?"

"I will take it upon myself to do so," said I. "But what in Heaven's name is this man to you, madame? He is a militant anarchist, whose creed is not yours, whose propaganda teaches merciless violence, whose programme is terror."

She was gazing at me with dilated eyes, her hands holding tight to the balustrade.

"Did you not know that?" I asked, astonished.

"No," she said.

"You are not aware that John Buckhurst is the soul and center of the Belleville Reds?"

"It is—it is false!" she stammered.

"No, madame, it is true. He wears a smug mask here; he has deceived you all."

"John Buckhurst will answer for himself," she said, steadily.

"When, madame?"

For answer she stepped across the hall and laid one hand against the blank wall. Then, reaching upward, she drew from between the ponderous blocks little strips of steel, colored like mortar, dropping them to the stone floor, where they rang out.

When she had flung away the last one, she stepped back and set her frail shoulder to the wall; instantly a mass of stone swung silently on an unseen pivot, a yellow light streamed out, and there was a tiny chamber, illuminated by a lamp, and a man just rising from his chair.

"Stop! Stand Back From That Table!"

CHAPTER IV.

Prisoners.

"This is Monsieur Scarlett, of the Imperial Military Police," said the Countess, in a clear voice, ending with that slightly rising inflection which demands an answer.

"Mr. Buckhurst," I said, "I am an Inspector of Military Police, and I cannot begin to tell you what a pleasure this meeting is to me."

I stepped forward and placed him formally under arrest, touching him slightly on the shoulder. He did not move a muscle, yet, beneath the thin cloth of his coat I could divine a frame of iron. "You have not asked me why I arrest you," I suggested.

"And, monsieur, I must ask you to step back from that table—quick!—don't move!—not one finger!"

For a second he looked into the barrel of my pistol with concentrated composure, then glanced at the table-drawer which he had jerked open. A revolver lay shining among the litter of glass tubes and papers in the drawer.

The Countess, too, saw the revolver and turned an astonished face to my prisoner.

"Who brought you here?" asked Buckhurst quietly of me.

"I did," said the Countess, her voice almost breaking.

Slowly Buckhurst turned his eyes on the Countess; the faintest glimmer of white teeth showed for an instant between the gray lines that were his lips.

"So you brought this man here?" he said. "Oh, I am glad to know it."

"Stop! Stand back from that table!" I cried.

"I beg your pardon," he said, coolly.

"Madame," said I, without taking my eyes from him, "in a community dedicated to peace, a revolver is an anachronism. So I think—if you move I will shoot you, Mr. Buckhurst!—so I think I had better take it, table-drawer and all—"

"Stop!" said Buckhurst.

"Oh no, I can't stop now," said I cheerfully, "and if you attempt to upset that lamp you will make a sad mistake. Now walk to the door! Turn your back! Go slowly!—halt!"

With the table-drawer under one arm and my pistol-hand swinging, I followed Buckhurst out into the hall.

Under the trees on the lawn, beside the driveway, I saw Dr. Delmont standing. His bushy head bent thoughtfully, hands clasped behind his back.

Near him, Tavernier and Bazard were lifting a few boxes into a farm-wagon. But there were yet no signs of the escort of gendarmes which had been promised me.

As Buckhurst appeared, walking all alone ahead of me, Dr. Delmont looked up with a bitter laugh.

"Monsieur," I said, cocking and uncocking my pistol, "it is not because this man is a dangerous political criminal, that the government has sent me here to arrest him . . . or kill him. It is because he is a common thief. . . . a thief. . . . a thief who steals crucifixes. . . . like this one—"

I brushed aside a pile of papers in the drawer and drew out a big gold crucifix, marvelously chiseled from a lump of the solid metal. . . . "A thief," I continued, "who strips the diamonds from crucifixes. . . . as this has been stripped. . . . and who sells a single stone to a Jew in Strasbourg, named Fishel Cohen. . . . now in prison to confront our friend Buckhurst."

In the dead silence I heard Dr. Delmont's heavy breathing. Tavernier gave a dry sob and covered his face with his hands. The young Countess stood motionless, frightfully white, staring at Buckhurst, who had folded his arms.

Buckhurst looked at me, long enough to see that the end of his rope had come. Then he slowly turned his deadly eyes on the girl before him.

Scarlet to the roots of her hair, she stood there, utterly stunned. Then the sudden double beat of horses' hoofs broke out along the avenue below, and, through the red sunset I saw a dozen horsemen come scampering up the drive toward us. At the same moment I stepped out into the driveway to signal the riders, raising my hand.

Instantly a pistol flashed—then another and another, and a dozen harsh voices shouted: "Hourra! Hourra! Preussien!"

"Mille tonnerres!" roared Delmont; "the Prussians are here!"

"Look out! Stand back there! Get the women back!" I cried, as an Uhlan wheeled his horse straight through a bed of geraniums and fired his horse-pistol at me.

Delmont dragged the young Countess to the shelter of an elm; Sylvia Elven and Tavernier followed; Buckhurst ran to the carriage and leaped in.

"No resistance!" bellowed Delmont, as Bazard snatched up the pistol I had taken from Buckhurst. But the invalid had already fired at a horseman, and had gone down under the merciless hoofs with a lance through his face.

My first impulse was to shoot Buckhurst, and I started for him. I ran past Bazard's trampled body and fired at an Uhlan who had seized the horses which were attached to the carriage where Buckhurst sat.

Again I ran around the wagon, through a clump of syringa bushes, and up the stone steps to the terrace, and after me galloped one of those incomparable coxswain riders—an Uhlan, lance in rest, setting his wiry little horse to the stone steps with a loud "Hourra!"

It was too steep a grade for the gallant horse. I flung my pistol in the animal's face and the poor brute reared straight up and fell backward, rolling over and over with his unfortunate rider, and falling with a tremendous splash into the pool below.

"In God's name stop that!" roared Delmont from below. "Give up, Scarlett! They mean us no harm!"

"Come down, hussar!" called an officer. "We respect your uniform."

"Will you parley?" I asked, listening intently for the gallop of my promised gendarmes. If I could only gain time and save Buckhurst.

"Foules-vous tous rendre? Out on non!" shouted the officer, in his terrible French.

"Ah bien. . . . non!" I cried, and ran for the chateau. As I gained the doorway they shot at me, but I only fled the faster, springing up the stairway. Here I stood, saber in hand, ready to stop the first man.

Up the stairs rushed three Uhlans, sabers shining in the dim light from the window behind me; I laid my forefinger flat on the blade of my saber and shortened my arm for a thrust—then there came a blinding flash, a roar, and I was down, trying to rise, until a clinched fist struck me in the face and I fell flat on my back.

They got me out to the terrace, and carried me to the lawn. One of the men brought a cup of water from the pool.

"Herr Rittmeister," I said, faintly, "I had a prisoner here; he should be in the carriage. Is he?"

The officer walked briskly over to the carriage. "Nobody here but two women and a scared peasant!" he called out.

Two soldiers lifted me again and bore me away in the darkness. I was perfectly conscious.

And all the while I was listening for the gallop of my gendarmes, not that I cared very much, now that Buckhurst was gone.

Suddenly the chapel bell of La Trappe rang out a startling peal; the Prussian captain shouted: "Stop that bell! Shoot every civilian in the house!" But the Uhlans, who rushed up the terrace, found the great doors bolted and the lower windows screened with steel shutters.

On the battlements of the south wing a red radiance grew brighter; suddenly had thrown wood into the iron jacket of the ancient beacon, and all eyes were to it.

NORMAL NOTES

By Hu Bliz.

The Y. M. C. A. held an enthusiastic meeting last night. Talks were made by Pres. Briles and other members of the faculty and also by Rev. Brooks of the First M. E. church. Several of the students also made talks. With the start made last night, prospects for a live Y. M. C. A. are exceptionally bright. About fifty young men came out and all are greatly enthused over the work. Pres. Cartwright and Secretary Hodges, both told many interesting stories of the student conference at Winslow, Arkansas. These young men came back full of the real Y. M. C. A. spirit, and the association was indeed fortunate in securing them as officers. A great social is planned for the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. in the near future.

Mr. Fentem will go to Calvin and Holdenville to confer with the teachers of Hughes county with reference to the extension work.

The extension department of the school, under the direction of Mr. Fentem enables the teacher in the rural and city schools to do work toward graduation and the life certificate and at the same time continue the work of their school. In short it is a correspondence course. Many teachers over the state are taking advantage of this opportunity and the normal mails have been flooded for the past three months with inquiries relating to the work.

Courses are offered in Algebra, Literature, General History and Psychology. At present only these courses will be offered and the demand is so great that others could not very well be offered this year. The enrollment in the extension department alone is near 300. We do not count these in our local enrollment.

The senior class met yesterday and elected the following officers to pilot the class through the last year of its school life: Frank McCain, president; Fannie Henderson, vice president; Robert S. Kerr, secretary. One of the seniors intimated that several other officers were to be chosen soon including a "class daddy."

The athletic association met and elected for the year officers as follows: President, Virgil Cottingham; vice president, Willie Gray. Hu Bliz was also elected yell leader for the year.

Following are some statistics on the increase in enrollment and out of town students since the opening of the school in 1909. The numbers are for the first week of the fall term only:

Year	Enrollment	Town	Out of Town
1910	164	40	124
1911	187	45	142
1912	214	44	170
1913	254	115	139

Notice for Hearing Petition for Appointment of Administrator.

STATE OF OKLAHOMA, COUNTY OF PONTOTOC—SS IN THE COUNTY COURT.

In Re: Estate of Humphrey Colbert Deceased; Leonard S. Williams, Administrator. No. 1169.

To the heirs, next of kin, and creditors of Humphrey Colbert, deceased and to Leonard S. Williams, administrator, of the estate of the said Humphrey Colbert, deceased.

You and each of you are hereby notified that on the 5th day of September, 1913, Edward I. Harrison filed in the above entitled matter, his petition praying that Leonard S. Williams be removed as administrator of the estate of Humphrey Colbert, deceased, and that his letters of administration be vacated and revoked and that S. J. Robinson, a resident of Pontotoc county, State of Oklahoma, be granted letters of administration of the aforesaid estate.

That on the said 5th day of September, 1913, the Court made and entered an order suspending the powers of the said Leonard S. Williams, as administrator of said estate until the day set for the hearing of the petition of the said Edward I. Harrison.

That said petition will be heard in the court room of the said court in the city of Ada, county of Pontotoc, state of Oklahoma on the 23rd day of September, 1913, at 10 o'clock a. m., at which time and place any person interested may appear and show cause, if any they have, why petition should not be granted.

Witness my hand and seal of said Court heretofore affixed this 5th day of September, 1913.

E. M. KING, County Judge.

Notes From the Labor World.

More than 600,000 men are employed in working the railways of the United Kingdom.

The national headquarters of the United Shoe Workers of America are to be moved from Lynn to Boston.

The United Textile Workers of America will hold its annual convention next month in Philadelphia.

The Glove Workers' Union of America has decided to make a vigorous campaign to increase its membership.

The mine workers of Illinois have voted to appropriate $100,000 to aid the striking copper miners of northern Michigan.

The United Mine Workers of America and the Western Federation of Miners together have a membership of nearly half a million men.

The label of the Cigarmakers' International Union, the oldest of all union labels, has been legalized in thirty-one states.

The glass bottle blowers' union and the manufacturers have agreed to continue last year's wage scale for another twelve months.

Thousands of children employed in the mills in Massachusetts have been thrown out of employment by the operation of a new law, which prohibits the employment of any child under 14 in a workshop.

The 22,000 members of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks will take a referendum vote to decide whether the association shall affiliate with the American Federation of Labor.

Frank Duffy, general secretary of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, has been named to represent that organization at the convention of the Canadian Trades and Labor congress to be held this month in Montreal.

Complaining they have received no increases within the last twelve years, engineers and assistants employed on lumber carriers on the Great Lakes have asked for a wage increase of $15 per month, while chief engineers of bulk freighters have asked for an increase from $125 to $150 a month.

A conference of twenty-four delegates of the building workers' organizations from eleven countries on the occasion of the general meeting of the German building workers' conference, in Jena, decided that the next ordinary international conference should take place in Vienna.

Massachusetts' new child labor law provides that no one under 14 years of age shall be employed to work at the various trades. Regarding children under 16 years the act provides that the State Board of Labor and Industries may determine whether any trade is sufficiently dangerous to the health or morals of a child to justify exclusion.

Each member of the United Mine Workers of America is to be assessed fifty cents a month for September and October. The proceeds will be added to the international fund in 1913-14.

Snow Baby New Miss of 20.

Portland, Me., Sept. 12.—Marie Peary ("Anight, the Snow Baby") the first white child born in the Arctic circle, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of her birth today at the island home of her parents in Casco Bay. When her father, Admiral (then Commodore) Peary, was laying the foundations for the chain of explorations which ended in the discovery of the North Pole, Marie was born at Anniversary Lodge, the winter quarters of the Peary expedition on Bowdoin Bay. The baby lived the first six months of her life in Arctic darkness.
